Job Announcement for an associate Professor at the Institute of Space and Astronautical Science, the Japan Aerospace Exploration Agency

The Japan Aerospace Space Exploration Agency (JAXA) is seeking to recruit an associate professor as described below. We widely call for recommendations and applications.

1. Title and Number of Position(s)
One associate Professor

2. Department
Department of Spacecraft Engineering, Institute of Space and Astronautical Science (ISAS)

3. Summary of Position (Duties and Required Abilities)
   ISAS/JAXA is promoting, as one of its most important tasks, science observations and explorations using spacecraft in deep space, through close cooperation between space engineers and space scientists. One of the key issues to achieve advanced deep space missions of the future is research and development of space communication including telecommunication for deep space. Furthermore, it is necessary to promote research and development of ultrawideband communication for space use, in order to develop more advanced spacecrafts at low costs which enables advanced science observations using formation flight by multiple small spacecrafts. The successful candidate shall promote original academic research in the fields described above in order to realize advanced space science missions in Japan, contribute to a great extent to ongoing and planned missions based on the academic achievements, and lead the way towards advanced missions of the future.

   The job description includes, at minimum, the following.

   - Lead worldwide academic research concerning space communication including both telecommunication for deep space and ultrawideband communication for spacecrafts to achieve advanced deep space science missions of the future.
● Steer the development of high performance and high efficient communication systems by adapting new technologies through in-house design and fabrication for ongoing and planned space science missions of ISAS/JAXA.

● Take a leading role in the development of space science project in the field of communication system on the ground level.

● Promote collaboration with researchers from other universities and engage in teaching and directing graduate students, based on the understanding that ISAS/JAXA acts as an inter-university research institute.

To fulfill these duties, the successful candidate needs to satisfy, at minimum, the following conditions:

● Have research experiences in the development of space communication of spacecraft, and be well recognized within the international community of researchers as the result of her/his academic activities.

● Be capable of taking a leading role in space science missions and steering research and development concerning space communication system and development of space communication components.

● Be capable of teaching and directing graduate students.

4. Terms and Conditions
(1) Salary will be determined under the provision of JAXA wage rules and regulations, taking into account ability and experience.
(2) Working days: Monday – Friday, except Japanese national holidays, year-end and New-Year holidays, annual vacation, WLB annual leave, celebration or condolence leave, maternity leave, child-care leave, care leave, nursing leave, volunteer activities, etc.
